Claims rejection

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 21,24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kim et al (6,717,634).

The patent discloses a thin film transistor switch for LCD composed of gate and data lines formed in non-parallel orthogonal direction both lines intersecting one another similar to conventional display array and insulated from one another, a pixel electrode at the intersection of the lines, and a ladder shaped conductive pattern (120) in contact with the data line (400) (see column 7,42-50).

As for claim 24, common electrodes are mandatory elements in LCD cells without which a display device cannot properly function.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 22,23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the same patent.

Although the way the specific elements in the structure of the claim and that of the prior art are different, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to safely conclude that the pixel electrode forms a storage plate of the storage capacitor associated with the display device based on the teaching in column 12, 15-20. Clearly, the pixel electrode in the arrangement receives image signals through the data line that is in contact with the capacitor when the transistor is in read mode of operation.

As for claim 23, there indeed is an insulation layer between the pixel electrode and the data line since capacitance requires a dielectric layer between two electrodes and one of the capacitive electrodes in the claimed invention is the pixel electrode.
